Did you know ???.....

Moisture buildup is a common reason why hearing aids are sent to the manufacturer for repair.

Many of today's hearing aids have intricate digital circuitry inside them, which can be very sensitive to moisture. As you move about each day, hearing aids can gather moisture (inside and out) from a variety of sources: sweat from around the ear, humidity in your environment, or even an inadvertent spray from the hose!

Invest in a hearing aid dehumidifier. It is designed to dry out the digital circuitry inside your hearing aids.....conveniently, at night, while you sleep. When you remove your hearing aids for the night, take out the batteries and place your devices in the dehumidifier. In the morning, upon waking, put the batteries back in, and put your hearing aids on. This simple routine can add years of useful life to your devices, and also reduce the need for repairs. Keeping the circuitry dry prevents corrosion.

We have dessicants and electric dehumidifiers available in stock.
